London Has Fallen

Reviewed by your name

Are you looking for an intriguing action-packed film where you can turn off your brain and enjoy the ride? If so, then "London Has Fallen", directed by Babak Najafi is a must see, especially in a movie night with friends.

Set in London in the 21st century, the film starts off with the funeral of the British Prime ^Mminister, who dies under mysterious circumstances. What was once the most protected event on Earth, suddenly turns into a deadly revengeful plot to kill the most powerful Western World leaders. Furthermore, there is a high-level traitor in the Secret Service. So, who might he be? You must watch to know for yourself.

Throughout the film's entertaining and absorbing plot, action-sequence and suspense are well-maintained; in addition to the humorous jokes cracked here and there. Not to mention the actors' realistic performance which is nothing short of spectacular, for instance, ~~the~~ when they try to shoot the President's helicopter down.

Moreover, the film displays important morals, such as loyalty and perseverance, which ^{are} reflected by from the scene that captures Mike Banning severely injured, yet persisting to go on and protect the president with his life.

In ~~the~~^a nutshell, I strongly recommend this compelling masterpiece for action-movie lovers above ~~to~~¹⁷, as it has strong language and violent scenes.
